Federal Judge Morton, sitting i the United States district court Boston, let it be known that the fall term of court is to be a harsh one for bootleggers. Two who pleaded guilty to selling liquor were threatened with sentences to the federal penitentiary at Atlanta. They are Frank Barnard, as compared with the same period Lowell, and Joseph Laclearc, Salem. The former was fined $200 and the latter $50. The court, when informed that Barnard, who is 64 years old, sold liquor to a young man on the streets of Lowell, declared its intention of sending him to Atlanta for as long a term as the prohibition law allows. Barnard's age and physical condition, however, saved him.

Writing catalogues is not considered a great literary attainment; but there is an exception to this judgment—that of dictionary making. Many of us don't see the use of Webster, or any other lexicographer, getting together a list of 175,000 words when most of us don't use more than a mighty small fraction of that number, and do not miss those we don't use. Viewed in this light a dictionary might be considered a useless volume. Some dictionaries are and yet linguists go right on making them. One is in the progress of making now that will not be consulted by many people.

The excuse for making the book is that for three thousand years the Babylonians maintained the foremost government of their times with forms of commerce and law yet used by civilized peoples. Most of our business law came from the Babylonians, they having used marriage licenses, notes, contracts and mortgages. Three great codes of law have already been iscovered, which modern nations are yet using. This dictionary in the making is to make the records of this old nation more available to scholars. Perhaps it is worth the trouble and the

Lunch tor the school child is a problem in many homes. One child of our acquaintance, who was underweight for her eleven years, showed an increase in weight when she began to take her lunches from home to school, instead of hurrying home and hurrying back and finding it necessary to eat with one eye on the clock. Common Sense and Lunches. Probably no greater wrong is perpetrated upon human beings than the self inflicted one of improperly selected lunches at midday. Cases of indigestion and other digestive disturbances find their origin in the noon meal. Restaurants and caleterias are oftentimes unjustly blamed and criticised for poor cooking, when the fault lies entirely with the luncher who selected a meal with utter disregard of his or her food requirements.

It is not so many years ago that the lunch basket was the usual thing in an office, and even the most fastidious girl comed to have no hesitancy in carrying a lunch. But times have changed.
Lunching out, especially in the cities, seems to be the vogue, and with but few exceptions every type of eating place welcomes women as well as men. Cafeterias, restaurants, and lunch rooms now offer bills of fare of sufficient variety to insure the privilege of a wise selection of food. To order a lunch and still keep fit for the afternoon's work is entirely within one's own discretion.

Competition among restaurants patronized by business lunchers is keen. One may specialize on food with the home-cooked flavor; one may make a specialty of dessert; while yet another may be popular for its sea food. But on practically all the bills of fare one will find such dishes as chicken croquettes with mashed potatoes, Irish stew, pot roast with noodles, breaded veal cutlets with potatoes, hot roast beef sandwich with potatoes, and paprika schnitzel with spaghetti. It does not seem to have occurred to these restaurateurs that the power of suggestion could be brought into play for their own profit as well as for the purpose of rendering their patrons a genuine service. For instead of placing vegetables and green stuffs off in columns by themselves, they could be printed near the meat items, under each individual item, naming those vegetables that should accompany the main dish. There is reason to believe that such an innovation would be appreciated by the eating public, as mistakes in food selection are made more because of unfamilarity with food values and combinations than because of a perverse desire to "eat what I like because I like it."

The popularity of a certain type of afeteria is due not alone to its facilities for quick service, so necessary when one has but an hour at noon, but also to its method of displaying food. Trained dietitians are usually in charge of kitchens in such places, and no small part of their work is the supervision of the arrangement of food on the counters. They realize the palate appeal of at-tractive combinations and their suggestive value. Such a cafeteria practically does the selecting for its patrons and offers what is good for them whether he guest realizes it or not.
Of course it is well known that occupa

ion has much to do with food requirements. The desk worker who hurriedly indulges in veal cutlet, potatoes, custare would make it a practice to order spin would make it a practice to order spin-ach, cold slaw, sprouts, onions, lettuce, or other vegetables with our meats, spa-ghetti, cheese dishes, and other protein and starchy foods, it would make for better efficiency. Inefficiency is more closely associated with improper feeding than we are prone to believe. Some-

Desserts are good in their place, but be dessert should round out the meal. It plays just as important a part in balancing a meal as the main articles of food. "It is often necessary to place the entire order for lunch at once, and when we sit with a tempting menu before us and a cavernous appetite, strawberry shortcake, Boston oream pie, chocolate layer cake, and other sweets of that character make a strong appeal. But find that relish for them has flown. A good plan to follow, when placing the ntire order at one time, or in selecting ood from a cafeteria counter, is to start food from a cafeteria counter, is to start light and finish heavy, so to speak. In other words, a heavy beginning should make a light ending, and when a heavy, tempting dessert is seen in the distance and coveted, the main dish should be light. There are few desserts can equal a fruit salad. Just a little thought in the selection of lunches will mean greater ability for work, and undoubtedly er ability for work, and undoubtedly The person who carries a lunch from ome is often to be envied. Tidbits om the dinner of the night before, dainty desserts, a hot drink, and a nour-ishing hot soup can all be packed with ease. The up-to-date lunch boxes now to be found in the shops come in varying sizes, are neat in appearance, and are made in such a way that they can be kept clean and sweet by the use of mild soap and water.

There should be on hand for the prep aration of a lunch to carry, wax paper paper napkins, papier mache containers fork, spoon, pepper and salt shakers, and a thermos bottle. Each sandwich or other article of food should be wrapped individually in sufficient waxed pa-per to cover entirely, so as to keep it fresh. In using the papier mache con-tainers, line them first with wax paper arranged in such manner as to have an end protruding, so that it may be folded over the contents of the box before the cover is placed on it.

In making sandwiches, do not skimp the filling. If one side of the bread is buttered generously, the other can be laid with the filling, but butter on both slices keeps the bread moist and prevents the filling from seeking the other can be seen the filling from seeking the other than the filling from seeking the can be seen the can be seen the can be seen the can be seen to be seen the can be seen the can be seen the can be seen the can be seen to vents the filling from soaking through. Avoid using as filling anything that will run and present an unappetizing appearance when the package is opened. If lettuce is part of the sandwich filling, trim the overhanging edges neatly. In making sandwiches for a man or boy, be sure to leave the crusts on the bread, but cut the sandwiches through the cen-ter so that they may be eaten easily. In packing the lunch, try if possible to lay the food in the box in the order in which will be eaten, or place together those rticles which are to be eaten together. The lunch for a girl or woman should perhaps be a little daintier than that for the boy or man. Remove the crusts from the bread, cut the slices somewhat thinner, and include at least one sweet sandwich made with a jelly filling.

Lunch for the school child is a problem in many homes. One shild of our eater and had strong aversions for cer-tain types of food which unfortunately were the very ones which her system needed. She was a child of unusua intelligence for her years, and it was not difficult task to change her ideas when she was told the whys and wherefores concerning her food requirements. She became interested in planning her own lunches, having been given a list of dainty sandwiches and other things which she could have, and it was gratify ing to have her proudly announce that she was gaining in weight after two-months of lunch carrying. She supplemented her lunch with a glass of milk or a dish of soup at the school lunch the greatest modern historian. "What-

To the Honorable Board of County Commissioners within and for the County of Oxford: Respectfully represent the undersigned Selectmen of Hartford, in said County, that a certain section of County highway in said Hartford is but little traveled, and that public convenience and necessity no longer requires its continuance, namely, from the junction of roads south of the residence of Arthur L. Bennett, at the end of a section of c unty highway already discontinuely north-easterly to the Livermore town line. They further represent that said highway is in unsafe condition for public travel, and cannot be repaired without great expense, and fin not discontinued certain alterations in location seem imperative. Wherefore we respectfully petition your Honorable Board, after due notice as required by law, and an inspection of said highway, to make such discontinuances, alterations or new locations as in your judgment would r new locations as in your judgment wou est meet the demands of public convenien best meet the demands of partial and necessity.
